

Taanshi kiya everyone? Laura Forsythe dishinikaashon. My name is Laura Forsythe, and I'm from the Faculty of Education at the University of Winnipeg. Welcome to Module 1. We've curated an experience using research, articles, and videos made by educators from across the globe. The module has been created using the First Peoples Principles of Learning, including that learning is embedded in memory, history, and story, where we ask you as a learner to reflect on the experiences that you've had or the experiences that you have witnessed. Also includes that learning involves patience and time, as we acknowledge that our practices, educator changes over time the more that we know. We are hopeful that in this module that we create a sense of curiosity about the possibilities in your classroom, that we provide extension activities, videos, articles, and strategies that you can build into your classrooms for best practices of EDI.